Using Upstream Telehealth Tools to Maximize the Workforce Capacity of Our School & Community Partners

The state of school based mental health programs, their partnerships with external providers, and their use of telehealth has undergone major shifts before, during, and after the shutdown. We learned from experience what worked well and what did not. The speaker will share research and engage participants in discussion about their existing partnerships with schools. She will describe how telehealth vendors can augment face-to-face services to support the well-being of elementary and secondary students and their parents at Tier I, Tier II, and early Tier III of the public health model. Finally, she will interact with participants to elicit factors in their own communities that might make some solutions more or less suitable.
